Eric Moussambani: Early Life and Background

Eric Moussambani Malonga was born in Malabo, the capital city of Equatorial Guinea, in 1978. Growing up in a country with limited resources for sports development, especially swimming, Moussambani faced significant challenges. Equatorial Guinea, a small nation in Central Africa, did not have a strong tradition in competitive swimming or adequate facilities for training. Most pools in the country were hotel pools, and formal swimming instruction was scarce. Despite these obstacles, Moussambani developed an interest in swimming and began to teach himself the basics.

His early experiences were shaped by the lack of infrastructure and support for swimmers. He had no access to professional coaches, and his training was limited to brief sessions in a hotel pool. Moussambani's determination to improve and represent his country became the driving force behind his journey. His story exemplifies the perseverance required to pursue athletic dreams in the face of systemic challenges.

Road to the Sydney 2000 Olympics

Eric Moussambani's path to the Olympics was unconventional and inspiring. In 2000, the International Olympic Committee (IOC) introduced a wildcard system to encourage wider participation from countries with little or no Olympic swimming tradition. This initiative aimed to promote inclusivity and global representation, allowing athletes who had not met the official qualifying times to compete.

Moussambani was selected as Equatorial Guinea's representative for the 100m freestyle event. Prior to his selection, he had never seen an Olympic-sized pool and had only started swimming seriously eight months before the Games. His preparation was limited, but his commitment was unwavering. Moussambani's journey to Sydney was marked by excitement, hope, and the desire to make his nation proud.

Daí, mesmo que eu quisesse, é impossível ficar imune a essa banga, basta alguém identificar-me o sotaque (ou a ausência dele). A verdade é que a vaidade angolana já se tornou monumento de fama internacional. Uma atração turística ambulante, que onde quer que estejam angolanos, uma multidão de curiosos aparece para tirar fotografias, entregar currículos ou propor negócio, como me aconteceu recentemente. Quando terminava o meu almoço, sai da cozinha o proprietário e propõe-me que lhe compre o restaurante, com todo o recheio, licenças, cozinheiros e empregados de mesa incluídos. E eu, do alto da minha vaidade, tão afetado pela crise financeira em Portugal quanto o pobre senhor, lanço-lhe a pergunta: Quanto é que custa? Kalaf, benguelense, criado no seio de uma família de funcionários públicos, com ligações à vila da Catumbela, lugar que visita com regularidade. A música e os palcos do mundo lhe permitiram traçar um mapa afetivo das pessoas que habitam a sua memória, assim como os locais que o marcaram – da fábrica de açúcar do Cassequel ao Caminho de Ferro de Benguela, da Restinga do Lobito à rua Jacob de Paiva, onde aprendeu a equilibrar-se numa bicicleta. A aventura poética teve início em finais dos anos 90, em Lisboa, numa altura em que a cidade ensaiava novas linguagens rítmicas, buscando novos caminhos para a música urbana feita em português. Neste percurso cruzou-se com os pioneiros do movimento de música eletrónica, contou histórias e gravou dois «disco- falados» que lhe valeram o título de Poeta-Cantor, A Fuga... e Strategies And Survival. Com o produtor João «Branko» Barbosa, crente de que era possível exportar Lisboa para mundo, fundou a Enchufada, núcleo de produção musical, editora independente e incubadora de ideias como Buraka Som Sistema. Em 2011 é editado, pela Caminho, o seu primeiro livro de crónicas, Estórias de Amor para Meninos de Cor.

The development of rugby in the racially divided communities of the settler empire and how this was viewed are explored initially. Then the editors turn to four case studies of rugby's expansion beyond the bounds of the British Empire (France, Italy, Japan and the USA). The role of women in rugby is examined and the subsequent development of women's rugby as one of the fastest growing sports for women in Europe, North America and Australasia in the 1980s and 1990s. The final section analyses the impact of commercialisation, professionalisation and media on rugby and the impact on the historic rugby culture linked to an ethos of amateurism.

eric moussambani historia: The Licit Life of Capitalism Hannah Appel, 2019-12-13 The Licit Life of Capitalism is both an account of a specific capitalist project—U.S. oil companies working off the shores of Equatorial Guinea—and a sweeping theorization of more general forms and processes that facilitate diverse capitalist projects around the world. Hannah Appel draws on extensive fieldwork with managers and rig workers, lawyers and bureaucrats, the expat wives of American oil executives and the Equatoguinean women who work in their homes, to turn conventional critiques of capitalism on their head, arguing that market practices do not merely exacerbate inequality; they are made by it. People and places differentially valued by gender, race, and colonial histories are the terrain on which the rules of capitalist economy are built. Appel shows how the corporate form and the contract, offshore rigs and economic theory are the assemblages of liberalism and race, expertise and gender, technology and domesticity that enable the licit life of capitalism—practices that are legally sanctioned, widely replicated, and ordinary, at the same time as they are messy, contested, and, arguably, indefensible.

eric moussambani historia: This Great Symbol John J. MacAloon, 2008 This Great Symbol is the definitive study of the origins of the modern Olympic Games and of their founder, Pierre de Coubertin, whose ideological stamp the Olympics still bear. Behind this fascinating blend of biography and history lies an impressive framework of cultural, social, and psychological theories skilfully employed to interpret the creation and symbolism of the modern Olympic Games. Hailed as both a classic in sport history and as a paradigmatic study in the anthropology of the past, This Great Symbol helped launch the new collaboration between historians and cultural anthropologists that continues to mark the human sciences worldwide. For this 25th anniversary edition, Professor MacAloon adds a new preface evaluating subsequent scholarship on Coubertin and the Olympic origins and a highly personal afterword describing the impact of This Great Symbol on his own subsequent career as an Olympic anthropologist and cultural performance theory. This book was published as a special issue of the International Journal of the History of Sport.
