icebreaker full book: An Icebreaker Leonid Tokarsky, 2014-08-24 This true story happened in the 1960s, at a time when the USSR was in a Cold War with the western world. The Soviet Navy obtained a new sophisticated weapon - the nuclear submarine with its short range rockets, which allowed access to the US coast, by way of the North Pole, from under the ice. A group of young people, who had just recently graduated from the Leningrad Shipbuilding College, were taken by the Soviet navy (involuntarily and unknowingly) on a suicide mission. The navy needed technical professionals able to take care of the imperfect and dangerous new submarines. The young people were assured that there was no danger in those operations and were ordered, by their commanding officers, to treat nuclear reactors as safe normal radiation mechanisms. There was only one sailor-technician from this group of involuntary die-hards, who survived: The author of this book. This incredible and true story of survival involving Soviet submarines, nuclear disasters and escape from the claws of the Soviet Secret Police has become a case study in a specialized branch of the Israeli Army Intelligence Corps. icebreaker full book: Polar Icebreakers in a Changing World National Research Council, Transportation Research Board, Marine Board, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Polar Research Board, Committee on the Assessment of U.S. Coast Guard Polar Icebreaker Roles and Future Needs, 2007-03-14 The United States has enduring national and strategic interests in the polar regions, including citizens living above the Arctic circle and three year-round scientific stations in the Antarctic. Polar icebreaking ships are needed to access both regions. Over the past several decades, the U.S. government has supported a fleet of four icebreakers--three multi-mission U.S. Coast Guard ships (the POLAR SEA, POLAR STAR, and HEALY) and the National Science Foundation's PALMER, which is dedicated solely to scientific research. Today, the POLAR STAR and the POLAR SEA are at the end of their service lives, and a lack of funds and no plans for an extension of the program has put U.S. icebreaking capability at risk. This report concludes that the United States should continue to support its interests in the Arctic and Antarctic for multiple missions, including maintaining leadership in polar science. The report recommends that the United States immediately program, budget, design, and construct two new polar icebreakers to be operated by the U.S. Coast Guard. The POLAR SEA should remain mission capable and the POLAR STAR should remain available for reactivation until the new polar icebreakers enter service. The U.S. Coast Guard should be provided sufficient operations and maintenance budget to support an increased, regular, and influential presence in the Arctic, with support from other agencies. The report also calls for a Presidential Decision Directive to clearly align agency responsibilities and budgetary authorities.

Schweizer, 2021-03-23 Fun lesson starters to help students communicate and break the ice!
Welcome to bel's book of icebreaker games! So, how do you get a lesson started? bel has put together a collection of tried and tested games that can be used to get a class going. The games are all very flexible and can be adapted to class size and ability. Many of them can even be expanded to become more than a 5-minute warm-up game. On occasion, a lesson doesn't go the way you planned, so if an icebreaker develops into a full-on fun and engaging exercise, run with it! The games are a colourful mix of icebreakers that can be adjusted to accommodate specific vocabulary or grammar topics. Some require next to no preparation, some require a bit more of your time, and some can be prepared by your students. The spectrum of preparation ranges from only needing a few ideas to preparing simple worksheets or cards. The most important thing with these icebreakers is to have fun. It is easy to forget how much repetition learners need. Be patient, be understanding, and help your students to enjoy the learning process. And of course, make sure that you enjoy yourself, too! Have fun and break some ice! A different language is a different vision of life.
